[This chapter is dedicated to all the teachers I met at the school. I was honored to come to their classrooms to read stories to their students. Their "Good Deeds" of serving the students and the community are commendable. I was also blessed to see how they kept the Old Believer tradition alive in the classrooms. Each classroom was uniquely decorated with either the Church Slavonic or the Russian alphabet – or both. I reacquainted myself with the ancient Church Slavonic language, which I learned to read in college years ago. It was a language full of symbolism and deep spiritual meanings.]

As I looked at the schedule for the teachers that was in the staff room, I was impressed with the curriculum and the courses that were taught at the fully accredited school. The students graduated from the school with a high school degree. There was no question that this was the work of qualified teachers who were selected not only for their professional ability to teach, but also because of their religious and spiritual qualifications.

This was my weekly schedule for each of the classes that I worked with. One week I would do the elementary classes, and the next week I would do the middle / high school classes. I would do volunteer service on Tuesdays. Since I was a retired teacher, it was a privilege for me to come out of retirement and work with students, again.

My greatest surprise when I started working at the school was the fact that the students came from all the different churches in Oregon's Willamette Valley, where the Old Believers settled back in the 1960's. That means that all three groups were represented: those from Turkey or Turchani, those from China's Harbin area or Harbintsi, and the other group from China or Sintzyantsi. I had worked with all three groups as a teacher at 91 School.

"The community of Old Believers living in and around Woodburn, Oregon, consists of three separate groups, and their informal names refer to previous places of settlement. Two groups moved to China from Siberia after the Socialist Revolution of 1917. The Sintzyantsi lived in the Sinkiang province after leaving Semipalatinsk; the Harbintsi settled around Harbin (then in Manchuria, now China), having crossed the border from the Spassk-Dalnyi area. Living in isolated rural villages, the people farmed and hunted. A third group, the Turchane or "Turkish" group, originated in Southern Russia in the seventeenth century and, after various migrations, settled in Turkey in the eighteenth century, in villages along Lake Manyas."

I don't think the school would run so efficiently without the superb leadership of the principal, Ulita Seleznev. Her expertise was displayed in all aspects of the hard work that she did as a knowledgeable teacher and principal that played many roles in the school and the community. The students honored her with a special day on April 30th.

» A Prayer For ← "

Give to her Heart, oh Lord, Compassion and Understanding.

Give to her Ears, oh Lord, the Ability to Hear and Listen.

Give to her Hands, oh Lord, Skill and Tenderness.

Give to her Lips, oh Lord, Words of Comfort and Empathy.

Give to Fler, oh Lord,

Strength for Selfless Service and to Give Hope to Those She's Called to Serve.
